

To our Clients and Friends:

In these economic difficult times, the PROFEPA, has intensified the audits to companies to obtain more economic resources. The consequences of a PROFEPA audit can go from recommendations to improve various environmental aspects to the shut down of the company, besides the fines and sanctions.

In our experience, the environmental audits of PROFEPA usually find non-compliance in the following areas:

1. Intern Management of hazardous materials.
2. Room for hazardous materials.
3. Lack of safety signs inside the facilities.
4. Absence and lack of information in the Daily Blog of Management of Hazardous Materials.
5. Labeling of containers of hazardous materials.
6. Atmospheric emissions.
7. Non-compliance of safety norms for the employees.
8. Non-complete actualizations of the Contingency plans.
9. Various notifications to the environmental authorities.

The audits made by PROFEPA are excessively detailed and in accordance to the Mexican norms, therefore, unlike the visits made by other environmental departments, they usually find a lot more reasons for fines and sanctions.

In order to prepare your company against a possible visit of PROFEPA, we are making pre-audits, in which we review and analyze the level of compliance of your company, detect weak areas, and we suggest and implement solutions to make sure that your company will have no problems in case of an audit of PROFEPA.

In our experience, the savings experienced by the companies by making said pre-audit, pay its cost by far. Do not let the authorities to find you unprepared and be sure that your company is in compliance with the environmental regulations.

Please do not hesitate to call Alma Flores to arrange a meeting to give you more details.

We are at your service for any question related to the environmental matters of your company or establishment.

Kind Regards,
